

Atlas: 'Helping Bereaved Children' - An Introduction for Professionals

12th June 2019

This introductory study day is for anyone working with children professionally (e.g. school staff, community organisations, youth workers) who is interested in learning about how to support bereaved children or those who are anticipating a significant bereavement.

The workshop explores how children are affected by bereavement at different ages. It considers what is known to be helpful to bereaved children and those facing bereavement.

Through presentations, discussions and practical exercises, the workshop aims to equip delegates with enough knowledge and skills to enable them to support bereaved children more confidently.

This course is suitable for all those who work in schools, community, health and social care with children who are seeking an introduction to childhood bereavement. Please ask our Learning & Development Team if you are seeking a more advanced learning opportunity.
